JUNE, 1962 AND JUNE, 1944

It has now been eighteen years since American soldiers landed in France during the darkness of the morning of June 6th, 1944. This was, of course, the biggest amphibious operation of its kind ever undertaken and the democratic countries which were mounting the effort had been planning this operation for years.

It was necessary that American, British, Canadian and other soldiers land in Europe if Hitler was to be defeated and that is why the gigantic operation was staged.

We look back on the valiant efforts of the war years and it is sometimes easy to be cynical about them. It is easy to say, regarding fighting with the Russians, that we were actually fighting the wrong enemy.

But hindsight is always better than foresight and at the time of World War II the immediate menace for England and America and the free world was fascism. Hitler was murdering people in many, many countries — in the name of fighting Communism.

It may be true that he was against Communism, too, but heperated a dictatorship that was similar to Communism. And he was bringing about more death and destruction in the former free world at that time, by far, than were the Communists.

It is true we aided the Russians tremendously and that they took advantage of us after the war and that, if we had it to do over again, we might conduct our affairs with them differently.

The important thing to remember, in June, 1962, is that the great landings of 1944 brought about a great wage of unity of purpose and solidarity among the American people. They were as one in their hopes and thoughts. The defeat of Hitlerism was necessary and it was accomplished. For that, June, 1944, should be remembered.

We might also remember that, as a nation, the more united we are the stronger we are. Those who seek to divide us to turn one element of the population against another, must not succeed—as they have, in some cases, in recent years.

EAGLES

During the 1930's and the early 1940's great alarm was sounded in this country because of the probability that the bald eagle would become extinct unless something was done to protect it. The result was that a bald eagle act was passed, which extended federal protection to the bird which is the national emblem of the United States.

Recently, it has been pointed out that the bald eagle resembles closely the golden eagle in its infancy. Many persons across the country were greatly alarmed when stories coming from Texas during the past year indicated that eagle hunting was a very profitable endeavor, and some hunters had killed an astoundnumber of these magnificent birds.

This instituted the National Audubon Society to make a study of the diet of eagles and especially, of the goldern eagle. The results were interesting and should be enlightening to the ranchers who have heretofore felu that these birds were of detriment to them and their investments.

Approxanately, fifteen per cent of the golden eagle's diet consists of rodents, ground squirrels, pack rats, and other such animals, the elimination of which would be of benefiy to any rancher or farmer. Approximately eighty per cent of the bird's diet consist of rabbits, with the other five per cenu being made up of miscellaneous rodents, such as snakes, small birds or frogs.

We strongly feel that this action is desirable and that the eagle (both the golden and bald) should be protected in our continent.

THE OUTDOORS

We are now at the time of the year when many people will spend their leisure hours in the great outdoors. This is one of the most pleasurable times of the year for both young and the old.

The summer sun can be one of the main hasards. Many persons will attempt to exercise more vigorously than during other seasons of the year and, combined with the warm weather, may suffer from heat exhaustion or heat stroke. Moderation in exercise when one gets overheated is highly desirable.

While enjoying the outdoors, there are many plants, vines and shrubs which are infectious upon contact with the skin. Once contact has been made with one of these poisonous growths, serious infection can result.

Another danger during this time of the year results from water activities participation: Both swimming and boating can be highly dangerous to those who do not take proper safety precautions while enjoying their pleasures. The important things to remember while participating in water sports is that safety is always furthered by numbers and good sound horse sense.

With a little knowledge and a little precaution, the great pleasure of outdoors can be enjoyed without running a very high risk of fatality and family disaster. Each year many people are killed and other family tragedies occur because of the lack of knowledge in these safety and precautionary measures.

Peach Flips

Calling all teen-agers! You'll really "flip" when you try this new snack-dessert idea, appropriately named Peach Flips. They're so easy you won't have to wait for Mom to fix 'em. You can bake them yourselves.

Golden Peach Flips are little biscuit triangles, baked around fresh peach slices. The biscuits are a snap, especially with self-rising flour. Sift the flour, cut in the shortening and add the milk. Knead the dough gently just 30 seconds, then follow the directions for rolling, cutting and filling the dough carefully. Use your fingers or the tines of a fork to seal the edges of the dough — they'll stay closed this way.

With self-rising flour, you "can't miss." There's no fuss with measuring and sifting in leavening and salt and no chance of omitting these important ingredients either. Peach Flips have the boost of nutrition, too, in added B-vitamins, food iron and calcium when made with enriched self-rising flour.

PEACH FLIPS

¼ cups sliced canned well-drained peaches (1-pound 4-ounce can)
2 cups sifted enriched self-rising flour
¼ cup shortening
⅔ to ¾ cup milk
2 tablespoons butter or margarine
2 tablespoons brown sugar
Peach Sauce

Drain peaches well, reserving syrup. Sift flour. Cut or rub in shortening until mixture is crumbly. Add ⅔ cup milk and mix lightly until dough sticks together. Add more milk if necessary to form a soft dough. Turn out on lightly floured board or pastry cloth and knead gently 30 seconds. Roll out ¼ inch thick to a 16 x 8 inch rectangle. Cut into eight 4-inch squares. Using 4 cup peaches, place slices on one half of each square. Dot with butter or margarine and sprinkle with sugar. Fold over dough to form triangle and press edges together to seal. Prick top once with fork. Bake in hot oven (425°F.) 15 to 18 minutes. Serve with hot Peach Sauce. Makes 8 Peach Flips.

Hot Peach Sauce: Combine 2 tablespoons cornstarch and reserved peach syrup. Cook until thickened, stirring constantly. Add remaining peaches, heat over low flame and spoon over turnovers.
